ROOSEVELT
UNIVERSITY

Chicago College of Performing Arts provides professional conservatory training in theatre, music and music education.

CCPA includes two divisions: The Theatre Conservatory and The Music Conservatory. Nearly 600 students come from more than 40 states and 25 countries to study at CCPA.

The faculty consists primarily of professional actors, directors and musicians, including nearly 30 members of the Chicago Symphony and Lyric Opera orchestras (half of whom are principals) and theatre performers with credits from Broadway to Chicago and the West Coast.

In the burgeoning world of downtown Chicago in 1867, the Chicago Musical College, the third conservatory to be founded in America, was created by Florenz Ziegfeld, Sr.

In 1954, the Chicago Musical College merged with the then nine-year-old Roosevelt College. The theatre and the music programs were joined in 1997. In 2000, we chose the name Chicago College of Performing Arts to reflect the shared strength of our creative disciplines and to capture the greatness of the world-class city that is our home.
